Foreword

We are immensely grateful for the response of our staff, partners, supporters, board members and donors. All of you have contributed to help Mission East respond to those most affected by natural and man-made crises and without your commitment this great work would not have been possible.

Humanitarian crises, as a result of conflict and climate fragility have continued to dominate our responses. Our new 2022-2030 agency strategy, Together in Compassion, renews our commitment to humanitarian interventions to those affected by crises, alongside social and ecological justice for all. With this as our aspiration – in 2022, we reached an all-time high income of DKK 134 million, which enabled us to support 497,000 people in ten countries – more people than ever! Our level of impact and influence are growing!

The effects of the war in Ukraine will be felt for some time – and as always it is the most poor and vulnerable who will be hardest hit. Mission East was one of the first agencies to respond. During 2022 we assisted people arriving at reception centres at the borders in Hungary and Poland with food items and protection assistance. This assistance was soon extended within Ukraine, meeting the most urgent medical and food needs as well as setting up psychological and mental health support services. Closer to the frontline of war, people were supported with evacuation preparedness – and as the winter came, we reconstructed houses to allow the most vulnerable to survive. Innovative and promising initiatives have emerged, when we and our partners are looking into green reconstruction by using recycled materials to enable “low-carbon” rebuilding of war-torn homes.

Of course, our response to other crises continued, too and in many other cases around the world, we have supported our staff, partners, and their communities to continue with their life-supporting and life-changing work. In Afghanistan, the year concluded with a ban of our own women staff being denied the right to work imposed by the Taliban. Despite these obstacles, Mission East has expanded our relief efforts in north-eastern Afghanistan in response to the growing humanitarian crisis there, especially in the area of food shortages caused by drought and economic collapse.

As the people and communities we work with increasingly suffer from the impact of climate change and environmental degradation, Mission East is helping them to adapt to these threats by developing resilient and sustainable water supplies, livelihoods, and food production. Together with our local partners, we have amplified the influence of local communities and created more accountable local structures.

We in Mission East will continue to work with courage and determination to respond to the greatest humanitarian needs and social justice challenges, and to advocate for unity, compassion, and creation care for all that lives.

Finances 2022

Mission East's sources of income include private supporters, foundations, and public institutions. The total revenue for 2022 was approximately 134 million DKK. This is a substantial increase of around 75% from 2021. The main reasons for this increase are the crises in Afghanistan and Ukraine.

Afghanistan programming was significantly expanded in 2022 – more than tripled the volume - in response to the growing humanitarian crisis. New grants were secured from Danish MFA, German Federal Foreign Office, the Afghan Humanitarian Fund (UNOCHA) and various foundations and private sources.

The new crisis in Ukraine resulted in contributions from both public and private sources to such an extent, that the engagement in Ukraine constituted a significant 12% out of the total project implementation.

The Danish public grants mainly consisted of the Strategic Partnership Agreement (SPA) with Danida including extra SPA top-up grants, and two single grants for the Syria and Afghanistan crises.

Gifts from private supporters is a bit lower than in 2021, where Mission East received an unusually high inheritance. Despite the drop in inheritance income from 2021 to 2022, the income from private supporters still ended at a bit more than 10 million DKK, which is considered a satisfactory result.

Iraq was still in 2022 one of the largest Mission East countries. However, looking at the future, it was decided in late 2022 to close the Iraq office and continue implementing with local partners. This will happen in mid-2023.

Bank "de-risking" as a response to international sanctions continued to make the transfers of funds difficult or impossible to some countries. This impacted our programming in Syria and Myanmar severely, although we did manage to continue activities in Syria to some extent and move forward on setting up an office in Syria.

Afghanistan

Mission East's work in Afghanistan addresses the multidimensional fragility of communities in rural areas. Our approach combines short-term emergency interventions with long-term solutions that empower families to restore food production, increase income, enhance climate change resilience, and preserve the environment.

Climate change and decades of conflict affect 28 million Afghans

Afghanistan remains one of the most severe humanitarian crises globally, worsened by prolonged drought and economic decline. The resulting food shortages have affected most of the population, with 28.3 million people, or two-thirds of the country's population, in need of humanitarian assistance in 2023.

In Afghanistan, the harsh reality of climate change manifests through widespread water shortages in 30 out of the 34 provinces. This results in soil erosion and desertification, and poses a major challenge as 80% of the population relies on agriculture for sustenance and livelihood.

Despite the chaos and uncertainty that followed Taliban's return to power in 2021, Mission East has kept its commitment to serving communities in need. In 2022, we have been able to provide lifesaving assistance by providing cash to the most vulnerable individuals. This financial support empowered them to meet their urgent immediate needs in terms of food, clothing, and shelter.

Given the dependency on agriculture for living, Mission East supported farmers, and their families in multiple ways. For example, by providing fruit and non-fruit saplings ensuring food security while combating deforestation. Other farmers were supported with greenhouses and beekeeping initiatives. Given the scarcity of water we also supported farming communities with improved irrigation. Moreover, we distributed seeds to farmers to help secure a better harvest in 2023.

Ukraine

Mission East initiated its operation in Ukraine within days after the onset of the war on February 24, 2022. For the crisis response in Ukraine, Mission East in 2022 managed to raise more than 15 million DKK from the Danish state as well as from internal and external collections to support the crisis response. The response was adjusted throughout the year, reflecting the developments of the crisis and the needs of the affected population.

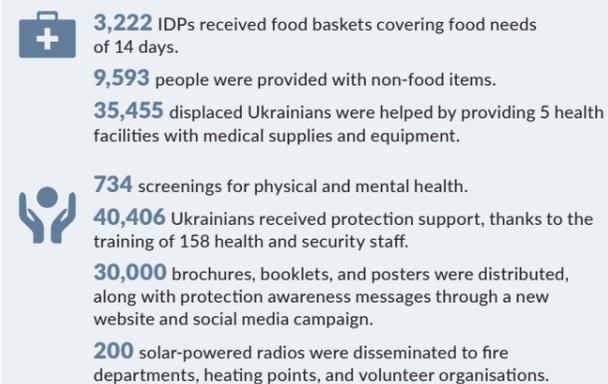

Providing humanitarian aid to war-torn Ukraine

The world held its breath when Russia invaded Ukraine on February 24, 2022. Since then, the crisis inflicted upon the Ukrainian population has intensified and the humanitarian needs escalated. As the war progressed, the nature and location of humanitarian needs changed, requiring humanitarian actors such as Mission East to adapt responses rapidly.

In Western Ukraine, Internally Displaced People (IDPs) were accommodated in public institutions and temporary housing facilities, while awaiting the possibility for a safe return. In Northern Ukraine, many homes particularly in the previously occupied areas adjacent to Kyiv had been fully or partially destroyed either by shelling or from being caught in crossfire between the warring armies. In South-Eastern Ukraine, the war continued, placing civilians at high risk of becoming casualties of war. Despite this risk, many citizens stayed in their home areas, unprepared for potential escalation of the fighting and threat to their safety.

Mission East's response in the first phase of the crisis focused on border crossing support (non-food-items and protection), food aid and health sector assistance. Later the focus shifted towards home repairs, winter preparations, and launching a protection awareness campaign. By close of the year, planning towards a green rebuilding intervention were initiated for implementation in 2023.

Iraq

Iraq experienced overall improvement in 2022, although its fragility and unpredictability persist. A greater number of refugees are returning home, reducing the dependency on humanitarian aid. Furthermore, the country's growing economy enables the provision of basic services to its people. Mission East plans to close its Iraq office in 2023 and continue smaller interventions through partner organisations.

Improving the resilience of vulnerable communities

Mission East has been actively involved in Iraq since 2014, after the fall of Mosul to ISIS. While there has been notable improvement in the overall humanitarian situation in 2022, the remaining needs appear to be enduring and require sustained attention.

In 2022, operations in Iraq were focused on long-term and sustainable solutions. Mission East implemented sustainable projects addressing the needs of vulnerable communities. Throughout the year, 208 business and scale-up grants were provided to vulnerable individuals, along with vocational training, enterprise development, and financial literacy programs. These initiatives empowered project participants, particularly women, to secure dignified and respectable livelihoods.

Water and sanitation facilities were rehabilitated and supplemented with hygiene training. 50 sanitation facilities were installed to meet the needs of people with disabilities. Vulnerable families were supported by the rehabilitation of 13 shelters.

Mission East's community centres provided vital protection services, including legal aid, psychosocial support, and advocacy for women's rights. Lastly, a pilot reparation project was implemented for 952 ISIS survivors and their families in collaboration with our partners.

Nigeria

Mission East initiated its work in Nigeria in 2021 by providing cash assistance to Internally Displaced People (IDPs) in Monguno, Borno State. In 2022, the engagement expanded to additional activities and preparations took place toward a stronger future emphasis on household resilience, local community capacities, and climate adaptation. This included the implementation of kitchen gardening activities planned for 2023.

Addressing displacement, malnutrition, and water scarcity

The insurgency by a Boko Haram faction has inflicted a devastating toll on the local population in North-eastern Nigeria, forcing many to flee from their homes. Over 8 million people are in need of humanitarian aid, making it one of the world's most critical displacement crises. Without support, many individuals resort to desperate survival mechanisms like trading sex for food, child labour, or child marriage to meet their basic needs. Consequently, extreme rates of malnutrition among children prevail.

Water facilities provided by humanitarian actors in the area over the years have been short-term solutions not reflecting the longer-term needs of this protracted crisis. As a result, vulnerable populations in the dry Sahel region lack sufficient access to water. At the same time, cholera outbreaks caused by temporary flash floodings overflowing latrine pits further exacerbating health and malnutrition issues among the affected group.

In 2022, Mission East provided cash assistance to newly arrived IDPs in Monguno, as well as vulnerable households facing acute food insecurity. Over 98% of the recipients reported achievement of acceptable food consumption levels and were able to avoid resorting to desperate survival measures. Additionally, vulnerable IDPs who had endured days of travel by foot through the desert to Monguno were provided with five days of prepared meals. Priority was further given to water supply and hygiene activities.

Lebanon

In 2022, Mission East supported its partner organisations in Lebanon to provide essential emergency relief, protection, and legal services. These efforts targeted vulnerable communities, including both host and refugee populations, who faced heightened risks of poverty and deprivation due to the Syrian displacement crisis and Lebanon's ongoing economic and financial disaster.

Supporting vulnerable communities in a multifaceted crisis

Lebanon continues to host the highest number of refugees per capita and square kilometre globally. Since 2019, it has experienced an unprecedented economic, financial, social, and health crisis. Consequently, the 3.2 million people in need, including 1.5 million displaced Syrians, have been severely impacted. Poverty, disrupted supply chains, and limited access to basic services worsen intercommunal tensions, particularly between host and refugee populations.

Mission East and its partner organisations provided emergency relief, supporting vulnerable individuals in meeting their basic needs and reducing their reliance on negative coping mechanisms.

Three community centres and three Social Development Centres (SDCs) across Lebanon offered essential protection and legal assistance services to individuals of all ages and genders. Within the SDCs, two child-friendly spaces were rehabilitated and equipped providing safe spaces for children of vulnerable families.

The protection activities and legal services had a positive impact on beneficiaries, reducing their psychosocial stress and enabling stronger social connections. Moreover, the inclusion of both refugees and host community members in mixed groups fostered social cohesion and integration between the two groups.

Syria

In 2022, Mission East responded to the protracted Syrian crisis in Rural Damascus, Homs, and Aleppo. Working through its partner organisations, Mission East focused on meeting the pressing needs of the most vulnerable populations, including internally displaced people, returnees, and non-displaced households. This encompassed humanitarian assistance, protection, food security, and livelihood recovery.

Supporting the resilience of vulnerable households in a protracted crisis

The Syrian crisis, enduring over a decade of conflict, remains one of the world's most complex humanitarian emergencies. In 2022, nearly 97% of the population lived below the poverty line, with widespread loss of employment and income sources. The situation is further worsened by hyperinflation, prolonged displacement, instability in certain areas, and the severe destruction of crucial economic infrastructure, notably water and irrigation systems.

Mission East, through its partner organisations, provided emergency assistance, protection services, and livelihood support to vulnerable households. Through the provision of emergency relief services, Mission East and its partners supported vulnerable individuals to meet their basic needs and reduce dependence on desperate survival mechanisms.

Activities focused on restoring urban and rural livelihood through the provision of inputs and training. This empowered both men and women to add to household incomes and decrease dependence on humanitarian aid. Essential protection services targeted the most vulnerable including women, girls, and children, helping them to cope with trauma caused by war and displacement, and to seek protection from gender-based violence, domestic violence, and child abuse.

Myanmar

Since 2013, Mission East has been working with local partners in the remote and isolated south of the Chin State, Myanmar. Efforts have been centred on capacity building of local actors both organisationally and technically, and sustainable development through environmentally responsible agriculture practices, water and land management, and nutritious food production.

Supporting the Mara people's sustainable food security and nutrition

In 2022, the situation in Myanmar presented exceptional difficulties for both the country and the local partner organisations. Following the COVID-19 pandemic and its challenges, the situation worsened following the coup d'état in 2021, which continues to affect the country.

The establishment of a military government resulted in the limitation of civil liberties, movement, and space for civil society. In the target area, the population faced severe restrictions, armed conflict between rebel factions, landmine placement, and scarce access to commodities and communication. As a result, many in the Maraland have been forced to seek refuge in India.

Despite the challenges, Mission East's local partners continued to implement activities, leading to improvement in food security and nutrition. Their efforts focused on sustainable Non-Timber Forest Products (NTFP) production for self-help groups and family farmers groups in the Mara community.

Cooperatives and grocery shops were established assisting the farmers in selling their crops and later becoming the main sources of goods for the communities. The partner organisations improved their capacity in NTFP production and management, environmentally responsible agriculture practices, rights of women and persons with disabilities, and advocacy for these important topics.

Nepal

Mission East has been working in partnership with local organisations in Nepal's remote Karnali Province since 2007, with a primary focus on building resilient communities. These communities are confronted with substantial challenges resulting from the adverse effects of climate change, which have profound impacts on their lives and livelihoods.

Building resilience, fostering inclusivity, and combating climate crisis

In 2022, Mission East implemented seven projects in close cooperation with its local partner organisations. The projects focused on sector interventions in the areas of emergency response, Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH), livelihood improvement, food security, and climate crisis, building the resilience of the most vulnerable and marginalised groups such as women, adolescent girls, persons with disabilities, Dalits, farmers, and youth. The support extended to various Civil Society Organisations (CSOs), fostering an inclusive, cohesive, and resilient society holding duty bearers accountable.

The program contributed to improving the socio-economic situation of the targeted vulnerable groups. The emergency response supported 260 households affected by landslides in October 2022 with various food and non-food items. WASH activities led to improved personal hygiene and sanitation at school and family levels. Women were engaged in income-generating activities, including integrated livestock management, retail shops, and hospitality management.

Farmers received regular sessions to enhance their capacity in climate adaptation and mitigation measures. Climate champions were identified and actively engaged in the advocacy for climate issues within their communities.

Armenia

2022 marked the 30th anniversary of Mission East's operations in Armenia, which began with delivering humanitarian aid during the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict in 1992. 30 years on, Mission East now works exclusively through our long-term partner organisation, Bridge of Hope, focusing on improving the rights of people with disabilities in underserved areas of Armenia.

Supporting sustainable futures for children and youth with disabilities

Mission East and Bridge of Hope have worked together on promoting human rights in Armenia for many years, with a particular emphasis on children and youth with disabilities. This long-term partnership has resulted in an impactful shift in perception, from disability being regarded as a medical question to it being recognised as a social and human rights issue. Throughout the partnership, Mission East has contributed to the institutional growth of Bridge of Hope and, in 2022, provided support for Bridge of Hope to further strengthen its organisational sustainability.

During the year, Mission East, in partnership with Bridge of Hope, supported the integration of children and youth with disabilities through physical rehabilitation and psychosocial services in remote areas of Armenia, where access to rehabilitation services is limited.

Working in partnership with two expert medical organisations, children and youth with disabilities were able to receive local outpatient treatment, thereby ensuring better and more sustainable outcomes for project participants.

Moreover, the intervention benefitted the families of the project participants as well, as they were given training on how to better parent and support their children.

Tajikistan

Since 1997, Mission East has implemented various projects in Tajikistan focusing on social protection, disability and inclusion, Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH), and Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR). In 2022, Mission East extended its efforts to include livelihood support for individuals with disabilities and emergency response for those affected by conflict and natural disasters.

Advancing localisation and supporting civil society organisations

Mission East continued to strengthen local leadership and civil society for more effective, resilient, and equitable development and humanitarian assistance in Tajikistan.

Four Civil Society Organisation (CSO) partners received support in six districts of Khatlon and Sughd in improving awareness and service provision for disability and inclusion, particularly individuals and children with disabilities. In addition, the emergency response programme for Afghan refugees in Tajikistan was implemented through another CSO partner. The CSO partners play a leading role in identifying needs, planning, and implementing these activities. They also evaluate progress to ensure success in achieving collective outcomes aimed at improving access to services and fulfilling basic rights for vulnerable and displaced populations in remote areas of Tajikistan.

The WASH and DRR activities in Afghanistan and Tajikistan's border regions employ a self-implementation approach. Mission East collaborates closely with the local communities, ensuring community members work together on urgent collective problems, assessing needs, prioritising projects, and organising their participation in implementing, monitoring, and evaluating outcomes of their collective action.
